SENATE SERVICES REPORT

Senate Correctly printed: SB02-107, 108. Services SR02-005, 006.

Correctly engrossed: SR02-006.

Correctly enrolled: SR02-006.

On motion of Senator Thiebaut, and with the unanimous consent of those elected to the Senate, the Senate stood in recess to hear remarks in honor of Dr. Martin Luther King by Senator Tate and Minority Leader Andrews.

Senator Tate's Remarks:

It has been an interesting weekend, and I want to just start a little differently by saying thank you to this body. Thank you for paying tribute, not by passing a resolution, not by allowing speeches to be made, but thank you for honoring the life and works of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., by for the first time in the history of this General Assembly, not convening on the day that is a national holiday and a state holiday in recognition of his birthday and his work.

Thanks to several of my colleagues that showed up at City Park in Senate District 33 for the program. Senator Matsunaka, Senator Linkhart, Senator Andrews -- Thank you so much for being there. And I hope that we all can take something out of the day given these difficult times.

Let me simply offer a couple of things - First the reason why I think the show and the vote by this Senate was so important. Understand, please, the history of this holiday not just nationally, but in this state. There are several people who still inhabit this building and this body who did not vote in support of such a holiday. And in all candor, in many segments of the community the fact that this General Assembly would not take off the day or part of the day in recognition has been continually perceived by many as an ongoing 'no' vote or an act of defiance and quite frankly a snub, or, as the kids would say, you were "dissin" the man for no good reason, he is dead and can't defend himself and it was deemed unnecessary. I have been in the General Assembly for six years and I have seen us take days off for Good Friday, and on other holidays and other occasions. I have seen us on some of our best days when we have stayed till midnight and beyond. And I have seen us on some of our worst days, when we have rushed in, said roll and left for the balance of the day. And I know that each day is not promised to us and what we do with it is special and has meaning, and I guess I would offer this as we reflect on the life of Dr. King that some things may have more meaning than others.

I am disappointed that the House didn't follow our lead. I looked at the House journal and saw that they considered three bills, a resolution and called it a day. That hardly brings to mind to me the fact that they had such urgent or pressing business that they could not join their Senate colleagues in a day of observance. But part of what Dr. King stood for is as Americans we have certain inalienable rights and one of them is freedom of speech, freedom of expression and freedom of thought and that we should respect different religions, different cultural backgrounds, different philosophies. And as it is the philosophy of the House to not acknowledge that holiday in that fashion, so be it, that is their prerogative.

We are in a difficult time in this county. The events of September 11, I would not say have 35 changed it, but I would say have awakened certain things in this country that we have dealt 36 with before. Many of us here, including myself, were not here when Pearl Harbor 37 happened. Many of us don't remember or weren't here when there was World War I or 38 World War II. Some of us barely remember Korea. And some of us remember quite 39 vividly Vietnam, because we had cousins, relatives and friends who went there and never 40 came back. And so there was an appreciation of what this country stands for. 41

I would simply close by saying in the tradition of Dr. Martin Luther King, we talk about him as a civil rights advocate, but also remember at the time of this death, one of the things I think in the minds of most people made him controversial was that he was a peace advocate on all fronts. He promoted civil disobedience, but he also had some concerns about the conflict in Vietnam and I have no doubt that he would have some concern with our continued activities overseas, regardless of what we perceive to see as the justification or motivation for the thing. But simply know this, one thing that I believe he pushed for was the consistency of ideals and philosophies. If you are going to fight for democracy abroad, you have an obligation to ensure that all your citizens domestically have that same opportunity for freedom and equality.

Thank you.

Senator Andrew's Remarks:

Senator Tate thank you.

Let me just share a couple of observations that moved me deeply from being at the preparade ceremonies with you at city park yesterday morning. The grand marshals at the 61 march were the four or five heads of law enforcement and emergency services for the city 62 and county of Denver, the Director of Public Safety, the Fire Chief, the Sheriff of the City 63 and County of Denver, the head of Corrections and the head of the Paramedics for Denver General. They represented a spectrum of racial and ethnic background, but what was 65 striking to me was that law enforcement and public safety agencies - who have in the past sometimes been perceived as unfriendly or unfair to the minority communities, particularly 67 our African-American community - were honored. You should have heard the warmth of the applause as they were announced as grand marshals. That does not diminish some of what we have to reflect on sorrowfully about imperfections in the history of our nation and our state, but it says good things about where we are after September 11th. It says good 71 things about the progress we have made as a state and as a nation in fulfilling the idea of justice for all - all created equal.

I was struck with the prayerful spirit of the event yesterday morning before the march It reminded me that Dr. King was a man of God and that his crusade for racial equality and justice was conducted under God's law as our founding fathers of this country understood it and as he understood it. Several Senators from both sides of the aisle heard Benjamin Netanyahu, the former and perhaps future Prime Minister of Israel, speak in Denver to an overflow crowd last week. He talked about the fallacy that some grievances are so great that terrorism attacks on innocent civilians, wanton bloodshed unrelated to the grievance and those kinds of horrors are justified. He said it's fallacious, partly by the illustration of the American civil rights movement - which was entirely conducted with non-violence, because that is the way Dr. King insisted that it be. Were there scattered acts of violence by whites and by blacks? Yes, there were, and we grieve those. But there was that principle of non-violence.

I was reminded of that yesterday, when Mayor Webb announced that the rebuilding of the King statue in City Park will depict Dr. King on the shoulders of four who went before him; Frederick Douglass, Sojourner Truth, Rosa Parks, and Mahatma Gandhi. So there is Gandhi, saying that we are going to work for justice, but we are going to do it non-violently.

This is something that I think we can reflect on with great gratitude and pride, the ability of our society to correct its worst evils, even though the work of that correction is never finished. It is not finished in relation to racial justice and a lot of other issues. But, it was an occasion that I was very grateful to participate in yesterday morning with my Senate colleagues.

Senate Reconvened.

On motion of Senator Thiebaut, and with the unanimous consent of those elected to the Senate, the remarks of Senator Tate and Minority Leader Andrews were ordered spread upon the pages of the journal.
