those who might not be here—they sacrifice so much for us to serve our state.

Colleagues, I'm under no illusion that this session will be easy. In fact, everyone thinks the odds are against us.

52 53 54

Times are tough. Too many Coloradans are still without work, and the state faces yet another year of difficult budget decisions.

Colleagues, the fact is we can succeed. We need look no further than last year to see what can be accomplished when Republicans and Democrats work together.

In 2011, we passed a budget that was responsible for all Coloradans--one that reduced proposed cuts to K-12 education while cutting government spending elsewhere and decreasing the tax burden on Colorado's small businesses and job creators.

This year, we can achieve just as much and more for the people of Colorado.

Colleagues, now is the exact time to focus our combined energy and intellect on doing our part to improve the economic condition of our state. This precise improvement will not come by the raising of barriers and creation of obstacles, but rather by the pragmatic work of clearing the way so that small businesses can flourish and working families can prosper. In this is the recognition that government doesn't create jobs, government doesn't create wealth, but rather, entrepreneurs create jobs, risk-takers create innovative economic growth. The pioneer work ethic guides us away from a blind and dangerous reliance on government handouts and toward economic prosperity for our families and our communities. This is not about the 1%; this is about the 100%. The simple recognition that every Coloradan must play a meaningful and active role in ensuring our state's economic recovery is vital to our future prosperity.

The responsible development of oil and natural gas is key to moving our state forward. Technical innovation has opened new opportunities in Colorado for the development of oil and natural gas. These advancements will bring thousands of jobs to the state and give a much need boost to our economy. In Northern Colorado it has been announced that between 500 million and 1.5 billion barrels of oil and natural gas can be developed because of these innovations. We must respect this responsible development of oil in other parts of the state as well, including on the Western Slope, which has been severely impacted by this recession.

Colorado has a long history of respecting local control issues. While we do respect local control, we understand that there are areas that have historically been the responsibility of the state, including the development of traditional energy. This session, we will fight to preserve the historic relationship between the state of Colorado and energy development.

In October, House Republicans embarked on our Building a Better Colorado tour to meet with leaders in small business and job creation across the state. During our meetings across the Continental Divide and back, we visited with farmers, ranchers, members of the tourism industry, manufacturers, non-profits, those in natural resources and citizens from all walks of life. We sat down for open and honest discussions with executives of large companies that employ hundreds of people and with others who employ only a handful of Coloradans.

But no matter Where we were, and no matter to whom we talked, the message was clear: government needs to get out of the way.

Burdensome government regulations and blind restrictions have a stranglehold on Colorado's path to economic recovery. We've heard the call for action, and today we'll introduce a series of measures that will clear the way for Coloradans to succeed.

One measure, the Colorado Timber Act, sponsored by Rep. Laura Bradford comes as a direct result of the bad-for-business regulations we saw on our Colorado jobs tour. In Montrose, Dallas Wright, plant manager of the Intermountain Resources sawmill, explained the role the mill plays in Montrose's economy. The jobs it offers have helped tie generations of Coloradans together. The mill helps strengthen forests by removing beetle-killed timber and helping to protect communities from the threat of catastrophic wild fires. Despite this plant's good work, Mr. Wright informed us that only 7 percent of the lumber his mill produces is sold in Colorado. This is because of unnecessary government restrictions that prohibit the use of this Colorado grown lumber in construction.

There is no structural deficiency associated with beetle-killed timber. This wood has been used safely in other states; we plan on putting it to use here in Colorado as well, creating jobs and helping Colorado businesses along the way.

If allowed to beetle killed trees, not only do we help improve the beauty and vitality of our forests, but managers like Mr. Wright can hire entire new crews for their saw mills. Mr. Wright can add 80 additional employees at his plant alone. That's 80 different families in just one community, while simultaneously supplying builders and contractors with another source of reliable and affordable wood—all that with one simple rule change.

Ill-thought rules hamper our road to recovery, which is why Rep. Libby Szabo, will introduce a bill this year that requires government to exercise foresight by having agencies turn in their rule analyses at least 15 days prior to a rule-making hearing. These analyses must make note of reporting the proposed rule's effects on our state's economic development and job creation. This measure has already received support from several employer groups, and is another way we can help Colorado businesses succeed.

One of the biggest problems we heard from small business owners is how difficult it is to comply with rules and regulations that change too often and with too little notice. Time and time again, farmers, ranchers and small business owners submit an application for a permit, only to see officials change the rules for their application after its submission. Such inefficient practices burden job creators with needless hassles and duplicative processes that waste time and resources in an already difficult economic environment.

This session, Rep. Jerry Sonnenberg and Sen. Cheri Jahn will introduce the CLEAR Act, which will ensure that the rules in place for a permit application remain in place for the entire reviewing process of that application. This measure will not only save small businesses from unjust fines and unexpected expenses associated with re-filing applications, but will help reestablish an essential relationship of trust between job creators and state government. It is imperative that entrepreneurs can once again believe government is working to protect their interests rather than trying to put them out of business.

To further Colorado's image as a business friendly state, I'm proud to announce The SUCCESS Act, another bipartisan bill Rep. Don Coram and Sens. Angela Giron and Steve King will introduce this year that emphasizes compliance over punishment for businesses' interactions with state department rules and regulations. Too often we hear government agencies compared to sharks, circling their prey and eagerly waiting for their feeding frenzy of fines to begin. My friends, we must establish a process that affords businesses a chance to correct their errors or minor infractions instead of issuing punitive fines by default. Far too many state agencies rely on these inflexible and punitive measures as sources of revenue. That changes this year. Colorado is on the path to a new era in state and private sector relationship.

For too long, the House of Representatives has neglected its oversight role. This year, our assembly will not act as a rubberstamp for department and agency requests. When a department or agency head meets with their proper oversight committee, they should expect to answer tough questions before their funding requests or statute changes may be approved. If they find themselves unable to provide a satisfactory answer to these difficult but responsible questions, they will be asked to do their homework and come back with the answer. This type of diligent oversight is a duty this body has shrugged for far too long and one which Coloradans rightfully expect.

Ensuring departments and agencies are held accountable is going to be a common theme this year. Rep. Cheri Gerou and Sen. Kent Lambert will sponsor a bill that extends the legislature's oversight role so that state agencies will be required to report to the state legislature any federal funding they receive, increasing government transparency and accountability. The Federal Funds Transparency Act will help legislators better assess our state's needs and Where hard-earned taxpayer dollars are being spent and misspent.

We understand that we face another challenging budget year, and we look forward to fulfilling our constitutional obligation to pass a balanced budget. That is why we have asked Gov. Hickenlooper to work with our Congressional delegation, and President Obama, to find ways we can reform the federally mandated health care and entitlement system, which chews a larger and larger portion of our budget every year. These seemingly unending mandates take money away from our schools and other budgetary priorities and put policy makers on a hamster wheel of uncontrolled spending and induced compliance with federal mandates.

We know there is no "magic wand" to fix the federal entitlement program forced on our state. But I believe Gov. Hickenlooper, Minority Leader Ferrandino, the General Assembly, our Congressional delegation and citizens and experts across the state can come together to find tailored solutions that work best for Colorado. This is a conversation that we need to have for the good of our state, and a conversation that must be started in earnest before it is too late.

Coloradans suffer when policy makers are forced to accept cookie-cutter, one-size-fits-all approaches from Washington, DC. Fifty states make up the composition of our great nation—all of them different from the other. Here in Colorado, the Continental Divide separates east from west. We have urban, suburban and rural corridors that are each different from the other.

Our state has unique needs that require Colorado specific solutions. Majority Leader Stephens will introduce The Colorado-Specific Solutions Act with Senate Minority Leader Bill Cadman. This act will codify our very deliberate attempt to seek home-grown solutions to the unique problems that face Colorado. Thanks to Majority Leader Stephens, Colorado will fight against corrupting federal mandates and set a course of our own. No longer should Coloradans be categorically lumped into federal solutions not tailored to the specific needs of the Centennial State.

56 Finding Colorado specific solutions applies especially to our most vulnerable citizens. We cannot continue to put the health and safety of Coloradans into the hands of a bloated bureaucracy in Washington, DC that's unfamiliar to the unique needs of our citizens.

Good government doesn't only entail increasing transparency and removing burdensome regulations; it also demands we recognize the will of the people.

10

Over the last decade, Coloradans have made their voices clear at the ballot box. The House Majority respects their wishes. This year, House Republicans will stay true the promise we made this past summer and will ensure Amendment 35 funds go to fight cancer and support chronic disease prevention—just as Coloradans voted for us to do seven years ago. I would like to thank Gov. 12 Hickenlooper for coming alongside our House Republicans to protect this funding.

14 15 16

19

13

In few areas have Coloradans been more resoundingly united than when it comes to tax increases. We saw this in November when 64 percent of Coloradans voted against a statewide tax increase. This isn't a Democrat or Republican issue. Coloradans across the political spectrum, from Democrats in Denver to Republicans in Lamar to independents in Jefferson County voted against Proposition 103. Coloradans do not want to be over taxed and we will respect their wishes.

24

Colorado is fortunate to have the Taxpayer's Bill of Rights, which has saved our state from the type of overspending that is plaguing Washington and pushing other states nearly into bankruptcy.

27 28

31

32

25

Everyone has been hit hard by the ongoing recession, but none more than our senior citizens. Most of our elderly live on fixed incomes and have seen time and time again their well-earned and vital tax exemptions kept from them because lawmakers—their elected representatives in government—wouldn't balance the checkbook. The time of balancing our state budget on the backs of our senior's most in need must come to an end.

34 35

Just who benefits from this exemption? We are helping the men and women who served our country in World War II, Korea, Vietnam and across the world. They are the generation who built the country we live in and love today; they are the men and women whom we are helping by protecting the Senior Homestead Property Tax Exemption.

39 40 41

43

37

38

Friends, the vast majority of these men and women are not millionaires. The seniors who will benefit from this tax relief don't have yachts; they don't live in a mansion on a hill. They are our parents and grandparents, our aunts and uncles, our neighbors who can use this little bit of money to pay their bills, for their food and for medication.

45 46 47

Colleagues, we will support voter approved property tax relief for seniors.

48 49

Our goal must be to move Colorado forward together and to recognize what has already been accomplished. It is right that credit is given to our governor for his hard work in bringing such national partners as GE to Colorado and Coleman back to Colorado and for the commitment of Arrow Electronics to grow their existing operations here. While it is right to take a moment to reflect on what has been accomplished, it is imperative that we remain focused directly on the dual goals of job creation and economic security for Colorado families.

My friends, ours is the time for action. We have been called by our fellow citizens to meet the challenges head-on. We have 120 days—perhaps less--to help put Colorado back on the path to prosperity. Though much work lies ahead of us, I know when our time together is over we'll be able to look back with pride on the accomplishments of this legislative body. Republicans and Democrats, coming together to improve job creation and economic security for Colorado's working families and small businesses. My friends, it's time to build a better Colorado together.

Thank you; may God bless you, and may He continue to bless the Great State of Colorado.

Minority Leader Mark Ferrandino addressed the members of the House of Representatives:

Good morning Mr. Speaker, Madam Majority Leader, fellow members and honored guests.

Before I continue I want to issue a warm welcome to the newest member of our chamber, Representative Dave Young of Greeley.

I also want to take a moment to welcome my twin sister Nicole, and her daughter – my niece – Abby, who turns nine next week. Happy ninth birthday, Abby.

Finally, I want to welcome my husband, Greg Wertsch. Thank you for your love and support.

Members, I am deeply honored to have been selected as leader of the House Democratic caucus. This is my first chance to address you in this way, on this day, and I cherish the opportunity.

You have seen the headlines. The press and the pundits have already written off this session. One newspaper said the other day that everyone expects this session to be – and I quote – "a massive partisan brawl."

Mr. Speaker, I've heard you today. Together, we can prove the pundits wrong.

We can show a skeptical public that the Colorado General Assembly is not the United States Congress.

Members, what we do and do not accomplish during this session is entirely up to each of us working together. There are no predetermined outcomes.

To assume that we will fail – as many do – is to wander into a trap of mediocrity. It affirms the cynics' deepest doubts, and neglects the spirit of service that stirred us to run for office in the first place. And if we fall down on our responsibilities, it is Colorado families who will ultimately be hurt.

I stand before you today to make this commitment: House Democrats will not take the low road toward gridlock and dysfunction.

Mr. Speaker, I am not issuing a challenge, but an invitation. We can be partners, not partisans. We can actually get things done for the people of Colorado.

When the session ends, there will be plenty of time for Democrats and Republicans to make their case to the voters, and for the voters to judge us on how well we did. But for the next hundred and twenty days – or less! -- Coloradans want to see the two parties working together to enact practical solutions to address the 7 state's problems. 8 9 I fully expect vigorous debate and at times stark disagreement. After all, the 10 opinions in this room are as varied as the topography of our state. 11 12 But when we can forge meaningful partnerships, we should. That's what the 13 people who sent us here want. 14 15 There are core issues we can all agree on: 16 17 One, Colorado needs more good-paying jobs; 18 19 Two, it needs an education system that prepares our children to succeed in a 20 global economy; 21 And three, it needs to adapt to changing economic and demographic realities. 24 We can certainly disagree on how we get there, but these goals are shared. 25 26 House Democrats' agenda is simple: 27 We will fight to start up the engine of economic recovery with practical 28 29 solutions and innovative programs. 30 31 We will support Colorado workers and Colorado businesses to create more 32 good jobs. 33 34 We will reform inefficient programs that do not meet our high standard for 35 return on investment. Because what worked 20 years ago may not be working 36 today. 37 38 And you can be sure that we will fight for a public education system, from preschool through grad school, that lifts up our students, prepares them for a challenging and changing world, and provides them with the skills and 41 knowledge they need to succeed. 42 43 Education is the best economic development tool we have in our toolbox. As a person who struggled with a learning disability, I know first-hand the impact 45 of a strong public education system.

I am standing here today thanks to the amazing public school teachers who taught me. I am dedicated to ensuring that every Colorado kid has the same opportunity I did growing up.

49 50

48

To say that this state's economy is improving is cold comfort to the thousands of Coloradans who continue to suffer the effects of the Great Recession.

52 53

54 Nevertheless, Colorado's economy is growing.

55

56 The state unemployment rate is inching downward.

New companies like Arrow, G.E. and Vestas are coming in to take advantage of our favorable business climate, our natural resources and the intellectual 3 capital of our skilled and well-educated workforce. 5 And with Governor Hickenlooper at the helm, I am confident that we'll see more businesses – and more jobs – moving to Colorado. 8 Our foresight and leadership in developing the New Energy Economy, our 9 investments in knowledge-based industries like bioscience and biotechnologies, 10 are attracting big, forward-thinking companies to Colorado. With those 11 relocations come good-paying jobs that can't be outsourced. 12 13 We can compete with any state and any nation for any company. 14 15 But there's another story too, and one that is equally worth telling. It is the story 16 of the innovators working in the laboratories at our universities, research centers 17 and small start-ups across this state. 18 19 And it's about regular people willing to take the first steps on the rocky path of 20 entrepreneurship, with little more than a business plan and an idea. In 2002, Richard Lewis was a man with a plan for an information technology services company called RTL Networks, based right here in Denver. 24 25 With advice from the state small business development center in Denver, in ten years RTL Networks has grown to more than one hundred employees and has 27 been placed on Inc. Magazine's list of the five hundred fastest-growing 28 privately owned companies in America. 30 Colorado needs more success stories like Richard Lewis. 31 32 It is to help other businesses to follow the same arc that House Democrats this week introduced a package of bills we are calling "Start Up Colorado." 34 35 Representative Max Tyler's bill will give a needed leg up to more small businesses, the true engines of our economic recovery. 37 38 Funding Representative John Kefalas's Angel Investor program will create an 39 incentive to investors to take a chance on Colorado's innovators. 40 41 And a bill I am sponsoring with Representative Dave Young will help move 42 new technologies out of our laboratories and into the market. 43 44 Over the coming days and weeks, members of the Democratic caucus will introduce even more legislation as part of the Start Up Colorado jobs package 45 46 to get more Coloradans working. 47 48 By supporting the small and growing businesses of today we are creating a 49 framework for a more sustainable and dynamic economic expansion tomorrow. 50 52 But there are other, simple things we can do that will move our state forward 53 right now.

Like giving companies that employ Coloradans the first crack at state contracts, so our tax dollars create jobs here, and not in other states or overseas.

Page 11 Like partnering with Governor Hickenlooper in responsibly cutting red tape to help create jobs, while keeping rules in place to prevent companies from gouging their customers or fleecing their investors. 5 And like making better use of the state's business-development programs, building on the things we are doing right and fixing the things that aren't working, so that we can assure taxpayers that they are getting the greatest 8 number of jobs in return for their investment. 10 Job One is doing anything and everything we can, to help start up our economic 11 recovery. But it is not our only job. 12 13 The most recent recession has put a squeeze on our budget, one we are likely 14 to feel for a long time to come. 15 16 We simply do not have the resources to do everything. 17 18 And so we must prioritize. 19 20 We have to pass a responsible state budget, one that balances cuts against people's actual needs. Governor Hickenlooper's practical, pragmatic budget proposal is an excellent starting point. 24 But the responsibility of actually passing the budget falls squarely on us. 25 To balance our budget, we need to keep everything – and I mean everything – on the table. To take anything off at this point, to set up a false choice between 27 28 Medicaid and education, or Medicaid and seniors, is simply irresponsible. 30 There are no sacred cows. 31 32 We will work to improve any program that needs it, including Medicaid. The proposal Representative Dave Young introduced yesterday to foster innovation 34 in Medicaid should clearly demonstrate just how serious we are about pursuing 35 real reform. 36 37 Let's stop fantasizing about a magic Medicaid waiver that can make our problems go away. It just does not exist. 39 40 Let me be clear: Medicaid is not a "tumor" on our budget, as one political 41 leader from a different chamber recently described it. Our Medicaid rolls are 42 still growing because many people are still struggling. Simple as that. 43 Colorado already has one of the leanest Medicaid systems in the country. 45 My door is open to anyone who can make it leaner without punishing people – 46 particularly children, the disabled and the elderly. 47 48 Two years ago, we put in place a process that, if done well, could remake state 49 government.

The SMART Government Act set guideposts for a more outcomes-driven state government – one that articulates clear goals and implements strategic plans for achieving those goals.

53 54

55 The law envisions a comprehensive process of performance-based budgeting 56 that is more transparent and accountable to the people.

1 2 3	But this process cannot work without a commitment from everyone sitting in this room to take seriously the legislature's oversight role.
4 5 6 7 8	The upcoming joint hearings are a chance for creative thinking about innovative solutions – not for browbeating or piling-on. If done right, SMART can ensure that our government is, as Governor Hickenlooper says, efficient, effective, and elegant.
9 10 11	That's our ultimate responsibility as legislators – to help make our state the best it can be.
12 13 14 15	We must foster an economy Where businesses and workers can thrive, preserve an environment Where our air and water are clean and our citizens healthy and safe, and enhance a society Where equality and opportunity are not just words we speak, but ideals that we live.
17	It's a delicate balancing act sometimes.
18 19 20 21 22	Members, it is my great privilege to serve with you in the Colorado House of Representatives this wonderful forum for ideas. I look forward to working with each and every one of you to find practical solutions for Colorado.
