Student Achievement Improved by Families and Schools Working Together

- The teaching condition with the strongest connection to high student achievement is Community Support and Involvement – whether parents/guardians in the community are engaged, influential, and supportive of teachers and schools – across all school levels. (Colorado TELL Survey, 2011)
- Forty years of research has found that when families and schools partner, students have higher achievement, complete more homework, come to school more often, and stay in school longer. (Esler, Godber, & Christenson, 2008)
