Summary of Legislation

This reengrossed bill prohibits state agencies that solicit job applications to advertise that a person with a criminal background may not apply, unless a specific crime statutorily prevents the applicant from having that job. It also prevents agencies from stating this criteria on the application. In addition, the bill prevents agencies from performing background checks until a conditional offer has been given, and defines areas where discretion may be used when considering an applicant's criminal history. Finally, the bill specifies similar considerations for applicants under review by the Department of Regulatory Agencies.

State Expenditures

This bill slightly alters the hiring and licensing processes performed by state agencies and, in limited circumstances, may add two indeterminate expenditure increases. First, the bill requires the communication of a new policy to personnel administrators, and may require the alteration of employment applications. Second, the bill allows discretion in the hiring of individuals with criminal history, which may lead to differing interpretations in the hiring decision. This may then lead to appeals which would increase the workload of the State Personnel Board. These costs are based on variable circumstances and are thus indeterminate.
