Summary of Legislation

This bill prohibits the state or any of its political subdivisions from limiting the otherwise lawful use, display, possession or transfer of ammunition or a firearm during an official state of emergency. During an emergency, lawfully possessed firearms and ammunition may not be seized or confiscated, except as necessary to make an arrest, to gather evidence for a crime, or for purposes of self-defense. Civil actions may be brought in order to return a seized firearm or ammunition and against a person acting on behalf of the state or a political subdivision.

State and Local Expenditures

Overall, this bill could increase costs for state and local governments. Any such costs are contingent upon several conditions being met: the Governor declaring a disaster emergency, a representative of state or local government violating the new law, and an aggrieved person filing a civil action in county court. To the extent these conditions are met and the court finds in favor of the aggrieved person, court costs and awards for damages will increase. These amounts are anticipated to be minimal and have not been estimated.
