

If applicants decline, the bill has the potential to decrease cash fund revenue from applicant fees. Currently, individuals who apply for a concealed carry permit must pay a $52.50 fee to the Colorado Bureau of Investigation (CBI) to pay for a background and fingerprint check. Individuals who renew a concealed carry permit must pay a $13 fee to the CBI. Revenue from such fees is deposited in the CBI Identification Unit Fund. Any potential decrease in applicants for concealed carry permits cannot be estimated at this time.

The bill also has the potential to decrease state cash fund revenue from fines because fewer people can be charged with a criminal offense for carrying a handgun. However, the annual revenue reduction is expected to be very small. The penalty for a class 2 misdemeanor is 3 to 12 months in a county jail; a fine of $250 to $1,000; or both. The penalty for a class 6 felony is 1 year to 18 months in prison; a fine of $1,000 to $100,000, or both. Fine revenue that is not otherwise appropriated is deposited into the Fines Collection Cash Fund. Because the courts have the discretion of incarceration, imposing a fine, or both, the impact to state revenue cannot be determined.

State Expenditures

Judicial Branch. Because fewer people can be charged with a criminal offense for carrying a handgun, the bill will reduce the trial caseload of the Judicial Branch. However, the reduction is expected to be minimal. The majority of individuals who are charged each year with carrying a concealed weapon are also charged with another crime or are otherwise legally prohibited from possessing a firearm.

Department of Corrections. As of July 30, 2011, there were five offenders serving a prison sentence for the class 6 felony of unlawfully carrying a weapon on school, college, or university grounds. All of the offenders were convicted of other offenses in addition to unlawfully carrying a weapon. Therefore, the bill is not expected to reduce the number of individuals incarcerated in the Department of Corrections.

Department of Public Safety. If fewer people apply for or renew concealed carry permits, the workload of the CBI may be reduced. However, the potential reduction in permits cannot be calculated at this time.

Local Government Impact

The bill has the potential to reduce the number of individuals incarcerated in county jails. The penalty for a class 2 misdemeanor is 3 to 12 months imprisonment in a county jail, a fine of $250 to $1,000, or both. Because the courts have the discretion of incarceration or imposing a fine, the impact at the local level cannot be determined. The cost to house an offender in county jails varies from $45 to $50 per day in smaller rural jails to $62 to $65 per day for larger Denver-metro area jails. For the current fiscal year, the state reimburses county jails a daily rate of $50.44 to house state inmates. It is assumed that the impact of this bill will be minimal.

If applicants for concealed carry permits decline, the bill also has the potential to reduce fee revenue for county sheriffs. Currently, individuals who apply for a concealed carry permit pay county sheriffs a fee of no more than $100 in order to cover any administrative and training costs associated with granting the permit. Individuals who apply to renew a concealed carry permit pay a fee of no more than $50. If the number of individuals who apply for or renew concealed carry permits decreases as a result of this bill, fee revenue for county sheriffs will also decrease. The potential reduction cannot be calculated at this time.
