Pursuant to the "Aviation Development Zone Act" (act), an aircraft manufacturer located in an aviation development zone qualifies for a state income tax credit of $1,200 for each new employee that it hires. The current definition of "aircraft manufacturer" excludes a business or any portion of a business that is involved in the maintenance of aircraft.

HOUSE
2nd Reading Unamended

The bill modifies the definition of "aircraft manufacturer" to include a business or any portion of a business that is involved in the maintenance and repair, completion, or modification of aircraft and specifies that for any income tax year commencing on or after January 1, 2013, these businesses are eligible to claim the state income tax credit for hiring new employees pursuant to the act.

Currently, an aircraft manufacturer may claim a credit pursuant to the act for income tax years commencing prior to January 1, 2017. The bill extends the income tax years for which any aircraft manufacturer may claim the credit to any income tax year commencing prior to January 1, 2023.

1 Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Colorado:

2 SECTION 1. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly
3 hereby finds, determines, and declares that:

4 (a) During the 2005 legislative session, the general assembly
5 enacted the "Aviation Development Zone Act" that makes aircraft
6 manufacturers located in a Colorado aviation development zone eligible 7 for a state income tax credit for each new employee it hires; however, 8 businesses involved in the maintenance and repair, completion, or 9 modification of aircraft are not eligible to claim the credit;

10 (b) Colorado has few maintenance and repair organizations that 11 perform heavy maintenance and repair on aircraft and as a result, airlines 12 have to fly their planes to other states for maintenance and repair;

13 (c) Colorado has a pool of well-trained potential employees,
14 including veterans, with the skills and often the security clearance
15 necessary to qualify for the well-paid and desirable positions that aircraft 16 maintenance and repair, completion, and modification businesses need to 17 fill; and

18 (2) The general assembly further finds and declares that the 19 primary purposes of House Bill 13-____ are:

1 (a) To amend the "Aviation Development Zone Act" to include 2 maintenance and repair, completion, and modification of aircraft for 3 income tax years commencing on or after January 1, 2013. The expansion 4 of the existing aviation development zone income tax credit will 5 encourage aviation maintenance and repair, completion, and modification
6 businesses to operate in Colorado, create additional job opportunities, 7 expand the aviation sector, and produce new sources of revenue in 8 Colorado.

9 (b) To extend the number of years for which any aircraft
10 manufacturer may claim the aviation development zone income tax credit 11 so that all aircraft manufacturers, including aviation maintenance and 12 repair, completion, and modification businesses, will have a full 13 opportunity to claim the credit.
