Pay for success contracts leverage private sector resources to implement social services programs that are likely, but not guaranteed, to generate subsequent direct or indirect reductions in government spending for other programs. Under a pay for success contract program, a government enters into a pay for success contract with a lead contractor under which the lead contractor implements one or more desired programs, the government agrees to make payments to the lead contractor from resulting direct or indirect reductions in government spending, and the lead contractor uses the payments to recoup its costs incurred in implementing the program or financing the implementation of the program. The government shifts the risk of a program being unsuccessful to the lead contractor because it only pays the lead contractor if the lead contractor meets defined performance targets and sufficient direct or indirect reductions in government spending for other programs result from the implementation of the program.

The bill establishes the pay for success contracts for early childhood education services program for the purpose of authorizing the office of state planning and budgeting (OSPB) to enter into state pay for success contracts with one or more lead contractors for the provision of early childhood education services that will reduce the need for the state to provide subsequent education support and other social services. A state pay for success contract must include provisions that:

- ! Clearly define the type, scope, and duration of the early childhood education services that the lead contractor will directly or indirectly provide and the specific outcomes sought to be achieved based on defined performance targets;
- ! Provide for an objective process by which an independent evaluator will determine whether the defined performance targets have been achieved;
- ! Specify the procedures that the lead contractor must follow in order to request payments; and
- ! Specify that the OSPB must approve any request for payment made by the lead contractor and that, unless the contract preauthorizes payments if cost savings are proven in a manner specified in the contract and requires money to be set aside for that purpose, the obligation of the OSPB to make any payment is subject to annual appropriation by the general assembly.

With the approval of the OSPB and the lead contractor, one or more school districts may be additional parties to a pay for success contract to be entered into by the OSPB if the chief financial officer and the board of education of the district or districts review and approve the terms of the proposed contract. Any pay for success contract that includes one or more school districts as additional parties must provide for the allocation of payment responsibilities between the state and each district if the lead contractor meets the defined performance targets specified in the contract.

The pay for success contracts fund is created in the state treasury and consists of a maximum amount of $25 million of moneys transferred or appropriated by the general assembly from direct or indirect reductions in state spending resulting from the provision of early childhood education programs under a pay for success contract or any other source, any money received by the state from a school district that has joined a contract as an additional party for the purpose of making payments to a lead contractor, and fund investment earnings. Subject to annual appropriation by the general assembly, the OSPB may expend moneys in the fund for administrative costs and to make payments to the lead contractor as required by a pay for success contract. If a pay for success contract preauthorizes payments to the lead contractor if success is proven in a manner specified in the contract and credits money to the fund for that purpose, that money is continuously appropriated to the OSPB for the purpose of making the payments.

The bill also authorizes school districts, individually or working together in groups of two or more, to create district pay for success contracts for early childhood education services programs. A district pay for success contract must generally include the same types of provisions that a state pay for success contract includes and must be approved by the district board of education and the chief financial officer of each district.
