retirement and who does not elect a pension option with a payment to a beneficiary may, upon marriage, select a pension option with a beneficiary and designate a beneficiary. Current law does not limit the designation of the beneficiary upon marriage to the new spouse. The bill specifies that when a member designates a beneficiary upon marriage, the designated beneficiary must be the new spouse.

The bill clarifies that when a member elects an option 3 benefit, which allows the member's spouse and dependent children to be paid a benefit upon the death of the member, the beneficiary designation is irrevocable even in the case of a dissolution of marriage, death of a beneficiary, marriage, or remarriage.
