HELPING YOU STAY HEALTHY AT HOME

At Centura Health at Home, we know that nothing compares with the healing power of being at home. We recognize the importance of staying healthy and maintaining an independent lifestyle. That's why our interactive telehealth program is designed to help people living with chronic health conditions stay healthy at home.

By using a telehealth station to closely monitor your vital signs, we can intervene before a problem occurs. Telehealth is also an educational tool that teaches you the best way to stay healthy. Most of all, telehealth gives you and your family members peace of mind, knowing that every day a nurse is reviewing your progress, and is available to discuss your questions or concerns.

HOW TELEHEALTH WORKS

Telehealth provides daily monitoring and live, interactive video visits with a home care nurse through a regular phone line or internet connection. A telehealth patient station is placed in your home and is connected to a clinical station at Centura Health at Home. Each day, a friendly voice will remind you to go through a simple procedure to collect your information using a variety of tools connected to the telehealth station. Once completed, the telehealth monitor will have measured your heart rate, blood pressure, oxygen saturation levels, and weight. You will also be asked some multiple choice questions to further assist our staff in evaluating your health. The data is then sent automatically to the nurse at Centura Health at Home to review. We monitor your information closely, and if we identify changes in your health status, the nurse will conduct a live video visit. The telehealth station will enable you and the nurse to see and talk to each other to better assess how you are doing.
