Introduction

COLORADO ASSOCIATION FOR SCHOOL-BASED HEALTH CARE

November, 2008

Dear Friend of School-Based Health Care:

This year, five new school-based health centers opened in Colorado: one at Crawford Elementary in Aurora Public Schools, one at Alameda High School in Jefferson County Public Schools, and three in the Roaring Fork School District. We welcome our new partners! If you are interested in starting a school-based health center, please contact us at 303-399-6380 or through our web site, www.casbhc.org.

All of the school-based health centers listed in this directory provide primary care services to students regardless of their ability to pay. They are located in communities where access to care is limited for a large number of children, either because of low income, lack of health insurance, or geographic isolation.

School-based health centers help schools do their job of educating by improving the health and well-being of students and addressing behaviors that interfere with learning. Their programs are designed to promote healthy lifestyles, prevent disease, and intervene early when problems arise. Our purpose is to keep children healthy, in school, and ready to learn.

Best wishes,

Deborah K. Costin
Executive Director
